Winter 2023

Newsletter

Winter has once again settled over Western New York and holiday celebrations are back. I hope everyone enjoyed playing golf this Fall, since the weather was above average and the greens, prior to being perforated for the second time this year, were the best I've ever experienced.

We have made significant progress in righting the wrongs. The path forward is clear and our commitment is firm. The growing pains are obvious but rest assured steady improvements with regards to personnel, attitudes and performance will be achieved. We have retained the services of Dan Hensley to be the food and beverage manager, and Matt Stasiak, an old friend of Fox Valley and PGA associate, is on-board to develop the teaching and practice facility and assist with golf operations. Significant investments have been made and our expectations are high that a successful private golf club is attainable. Golf operations will include tournaments on Monday, and non-member (open) play for leagues on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. If a membership exceeding 100 can be signed, the remainder of the week will be reserved for members and guests.

Thank you all for thoughtful involvement and responses to the end of year survey. Over 200 positive responses were submitted which clearly indicates that a private golf club is feasible. We hope to retain the services of an experienced membership director to assist with coordination and execution of a membership drive program. We are currently reviewing a few proposed membership structures and hope to have membership packets available in February. The membership structure will include individuals, couples, and families.

Lastly, we are continuing to upgrade and develop the Fox Valley web page (www.foxvalleyclub.com) and expect it to become a more effective communications tool. Our expectations are abundant but achievable, if we move forward with purpose and commitment to develop a unique golf experience.

Respectfully yours,

Jim Barron
